Mel Warenback – In Memoriam

Melvin Warenback saw the world in puzzles and riddles: he could be at once creative and pragmatic, funny and deeply sentimental. At just 13 years old he was accepted to work as an intern for Walt Disney, but his career halted once they learned his age. His formal education included the School of Design and Art in Los Angeles and the New School in New York. As a paratrooper and cryptographer in World War II, Mel had his cartoons published in army newspaper publications. Mel's mind was like no other, with a career spanning art, fashion, media, and much more. Mel taught at San Francisco's Academy of Art for 15 years; well-loved by students, he was voted teacher of the year twice.

Mel was an avid cartoonist who entered the Fair cartoon contest religiously each year. Marinovation Learning Center Makerspace-Media Studio is proud to sponsor awards in his honor.
